Bureau of Mines Now Established

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The act establishing a bureau of mines in the department of the interior, approved May 16, 1910, became effective July 1. As originally approved, the law contemplated the transfer of the entire technologic branch of the U. S. geologic survey, the mine accident investigations, fuel investigations, structural materials investigations, the entire personnel, property and equipment, to the bureau of mines, but the sundry civil appropriation act, approved June 12th, amended the law to such an extent that the structural materials investigations, including the personnel and equipment for these investigations, went to the bureau of standards, department of commerce and labor.

Carrying out the spirit and intent of the law so amended, the secretary of the interior has transferred to the bureau of mines the investigation of mine accidents and fuels, together with the personnel and equipment of these investigations and has transferred to the bureau of standards the structural materials investigations and the employees of the technologic branch of the survey engaged in these investigations. The fully equipped testing station at Pittsburgh, also goes to the bureau of mines.

The bureau of mines therefore includes the mine accidents and fuel investigations for which an appropriation was made by congress. The total appropriations for the bureau, including salaries, rent and expenses of removal, amount to $502,000.

The work of the bureau of mines for the first year will be a continuation and expansion of the work carried on by the technologic branch of the geologic survey. The law in itself provides for a variety of other problems that properly belong to the bureau of mines and which should eventually be undertaken, such as methods of mining and metallurgical processes, but these activities will be deferred for the most part until congress gives additional authorization in the shape of adequate appropriations. The spirit of the debates in congress both on the bureau of mines legislation and on the appropriation items emphasized the desire to regard the mine accidents investigations as urgent and this will be the feature of the work.

In all, $310,000 was appropriated for mine accident investigations. Of this sum under the general plans approved by the secretary of the interior, $120,000 is to be spent on the rescue stations, $34,000 for equipping eight new stations, and $10,000 for additional equipment for five existing stations. The allotment for the investigation of explosives is $40,000, for electricity in mining, $14,000, appliances for preventing mine accidents $8,000, examination and codification of mining laws $5,000, and other technologic investigations, ore treatment, etc., $10,000. For the analyzing and testing of the coals, lignites, ores and other mineral fuel substances belonging to or for the use of the United States, $100,000 was appropriated. Of this amount $25,000 will be spent in the chemical and physical investigation of fuels, $25,000 in the inspection of government fuel purchase, $22,000 in fuel efficiency investigations, $5,000 in lignite and peat investigations and $4,000 in briquetting investigations.

The mine accident investigations which have been transferred from the geological survey to the bureau of mines were first authorized in the legislative appropriation act of May 22, 1908, carrying for this purpose an appropriation of $150,000. This was followed by a similar appropriation carried in the act for the sundry civil expenses of the government for 1910. A mine experiment station was established in Pittsburgh in 1908, at which, since that time, coal gas, dust, electricity, and other possible causes of mine explosions have been continually under way. The mining engineering field force of the geological survey has already made a decided progress in the study of underground mining conditions and methods. Practically all of the coal mines in which mine explosions have occurred during the last two years have been carefully examined, the gases, coke and dust have been analyzed at the laboratory at Pittsburgh and every effort has been made to determine the explosibility of various mixtures of gas and air in the presence of shots of different types of explosives. Considerable progress has also been made in the investigation of explosives used in coal mining, and the conditions under which they may be used with least risk. Manufacturers have submitted many explosives. The investigations and educational work in connection with the use of artificial breathing and other types of mine rescue equipment, the so-called oxygen helmets, have not only been useful in developing a more satisfactory use of such equipment in the examination of mine explosions, but also better methods for using this equipment in mine rescue work.

"The Indians have no knowledge of their tribal or clan names and are always called by their village or locality names. The Indians in the vicinity of Chandler river are called the "Chandler Indians. The same is true of the Chena, Salcha, Tatana, Mansfield, Circle tribes, etc.

The missionaries and the bureau of education have determined, however, that all of the Indians in the interior of Alaska are Athabaskan-Kuajokhotana with the exception of those in the Koyukuk district which are Athabaskan-Koyukhotana."

DELAYED BY WATER SHORTAGE

A shortage of water caused the closing of the Mayflower mill at Pioneer, operated by the Pioneer Leasing company, last week, has been remedied and the mill started up again yesterday with more at hand than it is capable of handling.

We may all be born equal, but don't try to force that theory on the mother of a first baby.

The man who is satisfied to wait for something to turn up gets used to being turned down.

After all there isn't much difference between a church lottery and a church wedding.

There are always two ways of looking at a question—the wrong way, and our way.

The longer a man refuses to see the error of his way, the further he will have to travel back.
